2 _PROJECTS

• Tacet Tacet Tacet

Since 2013

Audiovisual project, started as a collective based on an idea by Francesco Zedde, involving musicians and video artists. Every production is a collaboration with different artists, live formation is mostly solo, up to 3 musicians.

Concerts are conceived as audiovisual performances that mix a set of influences ranging from psychedelia to concrete music, from minimalism to post rock, more than 150 shows have been played worldwide.

• Divina Commedia – Inferno – Canto V

Acousmatic piece, premiered on 23-29 June 2014, Pesaro, Rossini Conservatory, Italy

50A MOSTRA INTERNAZIONALE DEL NUOVO CINEMA -(50TH INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION OF THE NEW CINEMA)

Acousmatic work for ambisonic system, realized with the facilities offered by LEMS laboratory at Rossini Conservatory. The piece, realised on a concept by Lucia Ferrati, is a electronic music composition based on the 5° chant of Divine Comedy by Dante Alighieri.

• No input set

Since 2015

Self built electronic instrument created with cheap and inefficient devices to achieve complex and unpredictable sound synthesis, represents the result of a research work involving Circuit Bending, Analog Synthesis, No Input Mixing.

By connecting a series of processors (circuits from cheap guitar pedals) in a closed cycle (the last out in the first in) the signal within the chain oscillates autonomously, produces a sound which characteristics depends on each of the parameters of the individual processors. The use of poor quality processors is advantageous in the perspective of exploiting the inherent noise to produce feedback, playing such a set leads to develop a live electronics practice that is completely different from the traditional one since is based on alternative paradigms. The instrument has been developed all along the last 5 years and modified several times, has been used for more than 80 shows and a few installations.

• Tridimensional music reproduction

2015 – Thesis and software development

Thinking of music for tridimensional sound reproduction leaded to imagine a compositional system that contemplates space as a main feature of acousmatic sound. Other than dynamics, pitch, and texture, this system consider the spatial information as a separate aspect of the sound object.

The aim was creating a system suitable for managing objects of the musical thought in a tridimensional environment taking into account the simulation strategies as well as the abstract behaviour of sound in space.

Within the production of the thesis, a “musical interpretation of space” and a set of “spatial paradigms” was defined according to musical purposes; a software was implemented to drive and control those paradigms. The application, written in max/msp includes an ambisonic encoder, decoder and a spatial granulator; a sound source can be related with the space it is projected in with a different handling of its frequency elements and time fragments: the software is designed to segregate spectral components and sound grains to assign different organized space characteristics to different bands from instances of a granulator. In short, this means dividing sound in frequency and time elements in order to spatialize them independently. The software also includes a set of tools for the realtime mapping of parameters: datas obtained from the analysis of the sound matter can be linked to the spatial engine, so the spatial behaviour of a sound has a direct correspondence with its spectral or dynamic characteristic (as it happens in the real world).

This allows to easily design complex abstract 3D soundfields in which the sound can fill the space with textures of its components, dynamically changing and auto-defining its behaviour according of the physical characteristics of the sound itself.

• Perpetuo

Acousmatic piece, premiered on April 22nd, 2016, Rome, Piazza Tevere, Italy

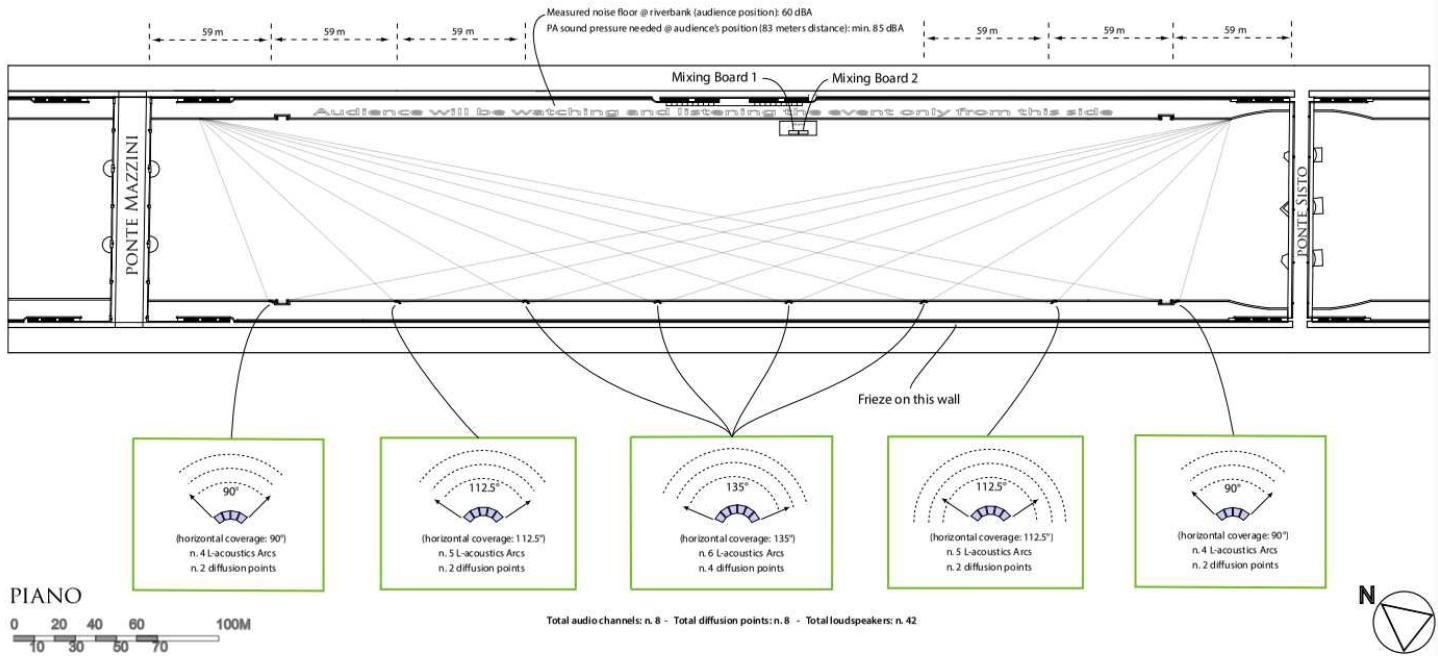

Perpetuo was part of the program of a large-scale acousmatic concert proposed in conjunction with the opening performance of the public-art site-specific opera Triumphs & Laments by William Kentridge in Piazza Tevere (area between Ponte Sisto and Ponte Mazzini)

Tevereterno's Young Composers Commission invited emerging composers to address Rome's Tiber River as a unique setting for site-specific music. The national commission presented original sound works conceived and designed for the Piazza Tevere's unique urban soundscape, creating music inspired by and responsive to the river and its context.

The listening space spread on 530x83 meters area and the sound was delivered by 24 high power speakers on 8 clusters with independent channels

• Discomfort Dispatch

Free impro festival series, since 2017.

No profit series of random hybridization events, format concept was proposed by Francesco Zedde who organized most of the editions in first person with the collaboration of several different collective and groups, the first edition was hosted in a basement in 2017 and later asked in some of the most well known venues for experimental music in Italy. Everyone is invited to get involved and to organize a Dispatch worldwide.

Such an event can fit whatever kind of venue, club, gallery, theatre, cinema; the lineup normally includes (from 4) up to 15 acts, each act is a duo (or trio) not longer than 20 minutes.

Each artist invited performs together with someone never met before, the aim is generate a unusual field for people to meet and play each other, create new connections. Every musician is invited as solo, once the organization has all the confirmations from all the artists needed, we set the duos taking into account contrasts and similarities in the respective musical language.

Since 2017 to 2020, 30 editions has been realized so far in 11 towns, involving more than 300 artists, from underground hidden characters to well known musicians in the rock scene, from punk heroes to conservatory teachers.

Notable names: John Duncan, Francesco Giomi, Massimo Pupillo, Luca Mai, Stefano Pilia, Bruno Dorella
